The happy relationship between development and gender Zubeda Issa Mohammed, 2014-09-04 Essay from the year 2013 in the subject Gender Studies grade B Monash University South Africa Campus Monash University course International Studies language English abstract Gender inequality implies to the unequal treatment of a person based on their gender This concept arises from the differences in social constructed gender roles within the society Gender inequality has been one of the social concerns during the world history of development In today s world however every individuals and organizations are aware that without the predication of women the development process will not be as effective and sustainable Therefore many organizations as well as institutions have debated on the issues concerning gender and development and have made significant improvement to make development gender equitable For instance the United Nations General Assembly adopted the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women CEDAW in 1979 which generally describes the several agendas for national actions to end discrimination against women whether be at home or at workplaces United Nations 2009 The introduction of policies procedures and guidelines concerning gender equality has improved the rights and statuses of women Hence the gender gap has been decreasing each year due to effective development processes which integrates women empower them and give them access to join leadership positions in both the economic and political sphere This piece of writing aims to examine how the development processes reinforces gender equality in terms of the decreasing feminization of poverty the inclusion of women in the development processes and the differences within symbolic dimensions of gender since gender is particularly referred as the socially constructed roles behaviours and characteristics that a certain society regard as appropriate for women and men critically reflect upon PHC programmes with reference to the author's personal work experience

Seeing Nature Through Gender Virginia Scharff, 2003 Environmental history has traditionally told the story of Man and Nature. Scholars have too frequently overlooked the ways in which their predominantly male subjects have themselves been shaped by gender. Seeing Nature through Gender here reintroduces gender as a meaningful category of analysis for environmental history, showing how women's actions, desires, and choices have shaped the world and seeing men as gendered actors as well. In thirteen essays that show how gendered ideas have shaped the ways in which people have represented, experienced, and consumed their world, Virginia Scharff and her coauthors explore interactions between gender and environment in history. Ranging from colonial borderlands to transnational boundaries, from mountaintop to marketplace, they focus on historical representations of humans and nature on questions about consumption, environmental politics, and on the complex reciprocal relations among human bodies and changing landscapes. They also challenge the ecofeminist position by challenging the notion that men and women are essentially different creatures with biologically different destinies. Each article shows how a person or group of people in history have understood nature in gendered terms and acted accordingly, often with dire consequences for other people and organisms. Here are considerations of the ways we study sexuality among birds of William Byrd's masking sexual encounters in his account of an eighteenth-century expedition; of how the ecology of fire in a changing built environment has reshaped firefighters' own gendered identities. Some are playful, as in a piece on the evolution of snow bunnies to shred bunnies. Others are dead serious, as in a chilling portrait of how endocrine disruptors are reinventing humans, animals, and water systems from the cellular level out. Aiding and adding significantly to the enterprise of environmental history, Seeing Nature through Gender bridges gender history and environmental history in unexpected ways to show us how the natural world can remake the gendered patterns we've engraved on ourselves and on the planet.

Gender Planning and Development Caroline Moser, 2012-10-12 Gender planning is not an end in itself but a means by which women through a process of empowerment can emancipate themselves. Ultimately, its success depends on the capacity of women's organizations to confront subordination and create successful alliances which will provide constructive support in negotiating women's needs at the level of household, civil society, the state, and the global system. Gender Planning and Development provides an introduction to an issue of primary importance and constant debate. It will be essential reading for academics, practitioners, undergraduates, and trainees in anthropology, development studies, women's studies, and social policy.
