Sign Language: Hands That Talk

Imagine having a full conversation without using a word. That's exactly what people do when they use sign language. Instead of using their voices, they use their hands. Here are some examples of how they do it.

Sign language is a visual language. It uses simple signs to help someone who is deaf or hard of hearing. Learning sign language is usually learned by watching sign language. They can look at people who are deaf and learn from them. Sign language has many different signs, and each one means something.

One of the most useful signs is the sign for "hello". It is made by waving your hand. Another sign is "love", which is made by holding your hands together. Sign language is a very important way for people who are deaf to communicate with people who are not deaf.

Sign language is also used by people who are blind. For example, they might use signs to tell someone how to get to a certain place. They might also use signs to tell someone how to do something. Sign language is a very important way for people who are blind to communicate with people who are not blind.

Sign language is a very important way for people who are deaf or blind to communicate with people who are not deaf or blind. It is a very important way for people to learn about the world around them. Sign language is a very important way for people to learn about the world around them.
