Thermobia domestica

LOCATION: They are distributed throughout most parts of the world and are normally found outdoors under rocks, leaf litter, and in similar environments, but are also often found indoors where they are considered pests.

CARE: Firebrats prefer higher temperatures and require some humidity. They love sugar and hate light. Food choices are fish flakes, our Feeder Chow, and chick feed. Though they like it hot and humid "wet" is not recommended.

BREEDING: From the first stage to death, firebrats can have up to 60 molts taking up to 5 years. At 1.5 to 4.5 months of age the female firebrat begins laying eggs if the temperature is right (90-106 °F). It may lay up to 6000 eggs in a lifetime of about 3-5 years. After incubation (12-13 days), the nymphs hatch. They may reach maturity in as little as 2-4 months, resulting in several generations each year.
