

SECTION 1 – MULTIPLE-CHOICE QUESTIONS
CIRCLE ONE ANSWER ONLY IN EACH QUESTION

Question 1. Which of the following coding conventions, principles or guidelines will NOT help in the development or maintenance of Java code?

- (a) Lines of code that are logically related should be placed next one another (principle of proximity)
- (b) Each method of a class should have comments that clearly explain the relationships to every other method of that class (one comment for every pair of methods in the class)
- (c) Code layout should highlight the logical structure of the code (fundamental principle of code layout)
- (d) Four spaces should be used as the unit of indentation (Java coding convention)
- (e) Names should be problem-oriented

Answer: (b). Commenting pairs of methods is clearly excessive and it would create massive redundancies by stating the preconditions of one method in all the callers. The other guidelines are used standard practice.

Question 2. Waived. (All examinees receive 2 marks.)

Question 3. Which of the following statements is true for flat statechart representations of typical software systems? (By “flat statechart” we mean a statechart that does not use nesting or concurrency.)

- (a) The number of states grows exponentially with the number of components in the system
- (b) Each state explodes into several outgoing transitions
- (c) A single transition might lead to several different states
- (d) Large flat statecharts need to have more than one initial state
- (e) None of the above

Answer: (a). It reflects an important phenomenon that limits what can be practically specified, by “flat” state machines or other means. You have experienced some mild state explosion in Assignment 2 Question 1 (b).

Question 4. Which of the following requirements is most likely to occur in a properly stated SRS? (Assume the SRS is “complete”, i.e., none of the requirements below needs to be “complete” all by itself.)

- (a) “The system shall have a professional-looking user interface.”
- (b) “Each button in the Formatting toolbar shall have a tooltip.”
- (c) “The average time for refreshing the display shall be 4 seconds or less.”
- (d) “The maximum time for registering a key press into memory shall be 0.1 seconds or less.”
- (e) “The minimum time for refreshing the display shall be 0 seconds, if possible.”

Answer: (b). It meets all the criteria of good requirements, and it is particularly good because it specifies a UI feature (“tooltips”) decoupled from the functionality features in the “Formatting toolbar” (regardless of the number of buttons). Option (c) looks good but it is somewhat ambiguous, since it might be interpreted as a “max refresh rate” assumption rather than the “registering graphical elements” obligation. It is important to avoid multiple “standard” interpretations even if some of them don’t make much sense from a technical viewpoint.

Question 5. Waived. (All examinees receive 2 marks.)
