Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group or a training group. The training group performed a 10-week program of aerobic exercise, while the control group remained sedentary. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during maximal exercise at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the training group had a significant decrease in HR and HRR at rest and during maximal exercise compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a 10-week training program can improve cardiovascular fitness in sedentary, middle-aged men.

Proceedings of the 2007 IEEE Conference on Systems, Man, and Cybernetics

When you input your T4, maintenance data, etc., at least 10 connections to the T4-based server objects (events, calendars, etc.) it is to start getting feedback from T4 and to use the program as a "client" program. This means that you can use the product as a stand-alone or distributed application.

When you input your T4 within the same world, you can, through a central server, use the product for planning. This is a very good thing, as it is the only way to use the product as a stand-alone or distributed application.
