ventures into Tashkent's post-Soviet music scene to place women musicians within the nation's evolving artistic and political arenas. Drawing on fieldwork and music study carried out between 2001 and 2014, Merchant challenges the Western idea of Central Asian women as sequestered and oppressed. Instead, she notes that Uzbekistan's women stand at the forefront of four prominent genres: maqom folk music, Western art music, and popular music. Merchant's recounting of the women's experiences, stories, and memories underscores the complex role that these musicians and vocalists play in educational institutions and concert halls, street kiosks, and the culturally essential sphere of wedding music. Throughout the book, Merchant ties nationalism and femininity to performances and reveals how the music of these women is linked to a burgeoning national identity. Important and revelatory, Women Musicians of Uzbekistan looks into music's part in constructing gendered national identity and the complicated role of femininity in a former Soviet republic's national project.

The research of history is one of the starting points in the process of organological research and covers careful research of historical documents, photographs, sketches, audio recordings, and works based on historical data. In the next four parts of the book, traditional folk instruments in Bosnia and Herzegovina are presented. The book is divided into several parts according to instrumental groups: Idiophones, Part 2; Membranophones, Part 3; Chordophones, Part 4; and Aerophones, Part 5. In each of these sections, the instruments are described separately, with special attention given to terminology, ergology, the technology of instrument making, techniques of playing, and musical capabilities and repertoire. The sixth part of the book is devoted to instrument makers and players of traditional folk instruments, the functions and occasions of playing, and the tradition, innovations, and distribution of folk musical instruments in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The Heritage of Musical Instruments Gujarat (India).
