Financing Social Protection:

Financing Social Protection Michael Cichon, International Labour Office, International Social Security Association, 2004
This publication considers the range of financing options available for the design of cost effective and equitable social welfare systems giving a thorough analysis of their advantages and disadvantages and their financial and economic implications Written by practitioners for practitioners the book discusses the design and maintenance of national social protection systems that seek to ensure effective and efficient use of available resources at the community national and international levels while supporting long term economic development The book explores theoretical and practical policy questions as well as looking at the policy process that determines the affordable levels of and scope of social protection in a given country

Financing Social Protection Armando Barrientos, 2008 There has been much discussion and debate on the kind of institutions and policies that could best address poverty and vulnerability in developing countries Financing has emerged as a key constraint on the extension of social protection The paper considers the main sources and key constraints of the financing mix for social protection in developing countries and especially low income countries among them It argues that achieving an appropriate financing mix is essential to ensure the resources required are available It is also important in strengthening the incentives for poverty and vulnerability reduction and in reinforcing the legitimacy of social protection institutions and programmes

Financing Social Protection Floors Elliott Harris, 2013 The effectiveness of social protection in combating poverty and vulnerability cushioning shocks attenuating inequality and supporting long term growth is well established but effective social protection systems have long been seen as an unaffordable luxury in many developing and low income countries The social protection floor concept aims at providing a guaranteed minimum of social protection at a reasonable cost even in resource constrained circumstances serving as a platform for the gradual implementation of a full social protection system Introducing and maintaining or extending the floor requires the mobilization of fiscal space both immediately and in the future The article argues that efforts to generate fiscal space must carefully consider issues of predictability as well as the impact of present funding choices on fiscal and debt sustainability macroeconomic stability inequality poverty reduction and growth and hence on future fiscal space It examines from this perspective some of the implications of generating fiscal space through additional domestic resource mobilization expenditure reallocation or efficiency gains reduction of debt service or external funding The article also presents some evidence of a wide range of recent interventions that have been financed at reasonable cost on a sustainable basis in countries at different levels of income and development using both own resources and external funds

Financing Social Protection in Tanzania

Mohamed Ihsan Ajwad, 2018 This note assesses whether social protection programs are adequately financed in mainland Tanzania We find that social protection programs are an important component of Government expenditures and complements other Government social spending including education and health spending In recent years the Government has strengthened social protection by i increasing social protection expenditures ii shifting social assistance from generally inefficient food and in kind programs to more efficient cash based programs iii shifting social assistance from relatively untargeted programs to those which are targeted to poor people and iv easing demand side constraints faced by households investing in human capital Despite these positive developments challenges to social protection remain i social assistance and employment programs remain underfunded relative to the needs of the population ii development partner financing remains crucial even though they are prone to external risks iii little is known about which social welfare services and employment programs work well iv many pension parameters are not in line with best practice and therefore sustainability can be
