The Films of Charles and Ray Eames Eric Schuldenfrei, 2014-12-05 The Films of Charles and Ray Eames traces the history of the Eameses' work examining their evolution away from the design of mass-produced goods and toward projects created as educational experiences Closely examining how the Eameses described their work reveals how the films and exhibitions they generated were completely at odds with the earlier objectives exemplified in their furniture designs Shifting away from promoting the consumer culture they turned their attention to the presentation of complex sets of scientific artistic and philosophical ideas During a critical period from the late 1950s to the early 1960s there was a moment of introspective self-reflection in the West stemming from the events of the Cold War This moment of uncertainty was crucial for it provided the incentive to question the values and concerns of society as a whole In turn designers began to question their own sense of purpose temporarily expanding the purview of design to a broader field of inquiry In the case of the Eameses they identified an overriding problem related to consumerism and excess in America and sought to resolve the issue by creating a network of communication between universities governments institutions and corporations The solution of promoting greater educational experiences as an alternative to consumerism in America required that different sectors of society functioned in unison to address political social economic and educational concerns The Films of Charles and Ray Eames reconsiders how design intersects with humanity culture and the sciences

Parody and Taste in Postwar American Television Culture Ethan Thompson, 2010-12-14 In this original study Thompson explores the complicated relationships between Americans and television during the 1950s as seen and effected through popular humor Parody and Taste in Postwar American Television Culture documents how Americans grew accustomed to understanding politics current events and popular culture through comedy that is simultaneously critical commercial and funny Along with the rapid growth of television in the 1950s an explosion of satire and parody took place across a wide field of American culture in magazines comic books film comedy albums and on television itself Taken together these case studies don t just analyze and theorize the production and consumption of parody and television but force us to revisit and revise our notions of postwar consensus culture as well
