dweller the verdant Mangala valley near the Bandipur National Park in Karnataka would seem like a haven of peace and tranquility Appearances could not be more deceptive as Saad Bin Jung discovered after forsaking his life in the city for a stone cottage in the valley If the surrounding jungles were teeming with wildlife of every variety the life that the human of the area led was no less wild Here he recounts the adventures that he had with some of them the leopard who moved into bison cottage the dining hall cobra the magnificent Mangala tiger Torn Ears the most photographed gaur of his time and the elephants whom he loved with a passion Colonel Hathi Jayaprakash and even the Rightchipped Tusker with his bullying ways amongst them Not to be outdone were the members of the Kuruba tribe and other humans Mr B the family expert the elderly manager with a raging libido the gorgeous foreign girls who almost saw him booted out of the family who came to share his life at Bush Betta the wildlife resort that he set up in 1991 Hair raising and hilarious these are stories that anyone who has had a taste of the wild or wished that they could will enjoy as much for their drama and comedy as for the many fascinating insights into animal behaviour that they provide No less compelling is the message between the lines the grandeur and beauty of India s forests and the need to preserve them at all costs
