

ACTIVITY 5 The Earth's atmosphere

Answer the questions. The answers are found in the text

The thermosphere

From about 85 kilometres and up to 400 kilometres up we find the thermosphere (also known as the ionosphere) and here the temperature increases again with altitude. The increase in temperature is notable between 120 and 150 kilometres altitude (300°C) and then from 150 kilometres upwards the increase is more gradual. The International Space Station rotates around the Earth within the thermosphere at over 250 kilometres altitude. This is the layer where the natural light displays known as the aurora borealis in the North and the australis in the South are produced.

The exosphere

The outermost layer of the Earth's atmosphere is the exosphere. This layer is a blurry frontier where the atoms from the Earth escape into outer space. It is located between 400 and 2,000 kilometres above the Earth's surface and beyond it is outer space.

COMPOSITION OF THE ATMOSPHERE.

The atmosphere is made up of a mixture of gases in the following proportions: 78% Nitrogen, 21% Oxygen, 0.93% Argon, 0.033% Carbon Dioxide and tiny amounts of other gases. But the composition of the air has not always been the same. It has varied over the course of time.
