Gender In Irish Writing:

Gender in Irish Writing Toni O'Brien Johnson, David Cairns, 1991 Most innovations eventually find their way to Ireland and so Irish literature is at last being examined from a gender perspective The eight essays consider works ranging from the Old Irish version of Diedre through Dracula Yeats Beckett and others to a current television series Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR Reader's Guide to Literature in English Mark Hawkins-Dady, 2012-12-06 Reader's Guide Literature in English provides expert guidance to and critical analysis of the vast number of books available within the subject of English literature from Anglo Saxon times to the current American British and Commonwealth scene It is designed to help students teachers and librarians choose the most appropriate books for research and study The Field Day Anthology of Irish Writing Seamus Deane, Andrew Carpenter, Angela Bourke, Jonathan Williams, 1991 Women Write Back Irene Boada-Montagut, 2003 Short story writing has flourished in twentieth century Ireland and Catalonia The genre has attracted some of the finest writers but in particular women authors This book considers the disadvantaged position of women in Irish and Catalan society as refracted through the medium of the short story The writers under discussion include Edna O'Brien Julia O'Faolain Eilís Ní Dhúihne Mary Beckett Clare Boylan Mary Dorcey Angela Bourke Katy Hayes and Anne Devlin Women Write Back also explores the subordinate position of Ireland and Catalonia historically in relation to the metropolitan powers of Britain and Spain respectively The cultural implications of the colonial connection are considered from the viewpoint of women and men The study breaks new ground in placing Ireland and Catalonia within the same comparative framework There are of course differences between the two societies the languages and geographical settings are far removed for instance But on closer analysis it is the similarities which predominate Both are post colonial societies the status of women in many respects is comparable issues of identity and language are to the forefront of consciousness and national debate In this book feminist theorising and post colonial discourses are fruitfully brought to bear on the literary creations of Irish and Catalan short story writers in what might be described also as an exercise in literary decolonization Women Write Back was awarded the distinction of the VI Premios de Ensayo de Catal n Gallego y Vasco for the year 2000 by the Universidad Nacional de Educaci n a Distancia in Spain A.U.M.L.A., 1992 Contemporary Lesbian Writing Paulina Palmer, 1993 Ireland's Others Elizabeth Cullingford, 2001 Dictionary of Munster Women Writers 1800-2000 Tina O'Toole, 2005 This dictionary will make an important contribution the knowledge of writing in Munster in both Irish and English over the past 200 years The dictionary has entries on 560 writers including 220 in Irish Each entry contains a bibliographical note a list of key references and a bibliography where applicable advances literary and cultural as distinct from primarily historical research on the region of Munster over the last two centuries enables a new view as a whole of the work of women writers juxtaposes the work of Irish English language and bilingual writers and thereby helps to develop an understanding of the province of Munster as a diverse cultural milieu and focus on the role of regionality in the process of cultural creation The Munster Women Writers Project based in the English Department at University College Cork was a recovery project aiming to make available the basic materials for biographical and literary research and analysis on the extensive number of women writers with Munster backgrounds or strong Munster connections in the period 1800-2000. The objective was to make more information on these writers available for future literary historians, feminist critics, and social historians to develop knowledge and understanding of this material. By making available the basic materials for scholarly research in this field, the project aims to help generate critical analysis of the role of regional class and gender factors in the formation of writers and the intersection of these factors in the nature of the work produced.

Folk Women and Indirection in Morrison, N Dhuibhne, Hurston, and Lavin Jacqueline Fulmer, 2017-11-30. Focusing on the lineage of pivotal African American and Irish women writers, the author argues that these authors often employ strategies of indirection via folkloric expression when exploring unpopular topics. This strategy holds the attention of readers who would otherwise reject the subject matter. The author traces the line of descent from Mary Lavin to N Dhuibhne and from Zora Neale Hurston to Toni Morrison, showing how obstacles to free expression, though varying from those Lavin and Hurston faced, are still encountered by Morrison and N Dhuibhne. The basis for comparing these authors lies in the strategies of indirection they use, as influenced by folklore. The folkloric characters these authors depict—wild denizens of the Otherworld and wise women of various traditions—help their creators insert controversy into fiction in ways that charm rather than alienate readers. Forms of rhetorical indirection that appear in the context of folklore, such as signifying practices, masking, sly civility, and the grotesque or bizarre, come out of the mouths and actions of these writers' magical and magisterial characters. Old traditions can offer new ways of discussing issues such as sexual expression, religious beliefs, or issues of reproduction. As differences between times and cultures affect what can and cannot be said, folkloric indirection may open up a vista to discourses of which we as readers may not even be aware. Finally, the folk women of Morrison, N Dhuibhne, Hurston, and Lavin open up new points of entry to the discussion of fiction, rhetoric, censorship, and folklore.
