Generating Texts:

Generating Texts Sharon Cadman Seelig, 1996 In Generating Texts Sharon Cadman Seelig tests traditional notions of genre by analyzing parallels between works that confound existing categories Seelig pairs three seventeenth century prose works with three other works each of a later century Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy with Sterne's Tristram Shandy Browne's Religio Medici with Thoreau's Walden and Donne's Devotions upon Emergent Occasions with Eliot's Four Quartets Proceeding from her authors similarities in method and common sets of assumptions such as concern with process and discovery time and eternity or the nature of the self she uncovers parallels showing that genre is not simply a set of formal features but rather a particular way of seeing the world that grows out of authorial attitude impulse and occasion In addition to its obvious appeal to students and scholars interested in Sterne Thoreau Eliot or seventeenth century literature Generating Texts should interest literary scholars and students more generally particularly those concerned with the interconnections between literary periods and genres Seelig has written an original and accessible contribution to the field of genre study

Reading Computer-Generated Texts Leah Henrickson, 2021-02-11 Natural language generation NLG is the process wherein computers produce output in readable human languages Such output takes many forms including news articles sports reports prose fiction and poetry These computer generated texts are often indistinguishable from human written texts and they are increasingly prevalent NLG is here and it is everywhere However readers are often unaware that what they are reading has been computer generated This Element considers how NLG conforms to and confronts traditional understandings of authorship and what it means to be a reader It argues that conventional conceptions of authorship as well as of reader responsibility change in instances of NLG What is the social value of a computer generated text What does NLG mean for modern writing publishing and reading practices Can an NLG system be considered an author This Element explores such question while presenting a theoretical basis for future studies

Natural Language Generation in Artificial Intelligence and Computational Linguistics Cecile L. Paris, William R. Swartout, William C. Mann, 2013-03-14 One of the aims of Natural Language Processing is to facilitate the use of computers by allowing their users to communicate in natural language There are two important aspects to person machine communication understanding and generating While natural language understanding has been a major focus of research natural language generation is a relatively new and increasingly active field of research This book presents an overview of the state of the art in natural language generation describing both new results and directions for new research The principal emphasis of natural language generation is not only to facilitate the use of computers but also to develop a computational theory of human language ability In doing so it is a tool for extending clarifying and verifying theories that have been put forth in linguistics psychology and sociology about how people communicate A natural language generator will typically have access to a large body of knowledge from which to select information to present to users as well as number of expressing it Generating a text can thus be seen as a problem of ous ways decision making under multiple constraints constraints from the propositional knowledge at hand from the linguistic tools available from the communicative goals and intentions to be achieved from the audience the text is aimed at and from the situation and past discourse Researchers in generation try to identify the factors involved in this process and determine how best to represent the factors and their dependencies Sign, System and Function Jerzy Pelc, Thomas A.
